Winter Backflow Security

If you read the summer issue of our newsletter, you know that irrigation backflows are a prime target for thieves.

You may have already taken steps to protect your backflow by enclosing it in a steel cage or other protective enclosure. Fall is a perfect time to take an additional security measure.

Keesen Enterprises can help you to guarantee your backflow is there when spring arrives. Our technicians can install coupling unions that allow the backflow to be easily removed at the time your system is drained and stored at your site or by Keesen Enterprises.

If you are interested in a quote to install unions, and/or having Keesen Enterprises store your backflow(s), please call us at (303) 761-0444 or e-mail us at service@keesenent.com. When spring comes and your backflow is there, you'll be glad you did!

Customer Surveys Provide An Opportunity to Talk Back

Each year, Keesen Enterprises sends out a survey to its customers asking for feedback on the services that we provided throughout the year.

While we love all of the positive feedback we get every year, we also look forward to constructive criticism as well.

Even though we have been in business for 35 years, we still learn something new each year when we review the surveys that our customers turn in to us.

"Customer feedback is a key component to being successful. We find out what our customers' needs are, what their likes and dislikes are, and how we can provide better services for them that meet their needs," said Steve Steele, Director of Business Operations for Keesen.

The survey is e-mailed or mailed to every customer annually in September. Customers can easily complete the survey and e-mail or fax it back.

As in years past, Keesen also enters the name of each customer that returns a survey into a drawing for a gift certificate to a local restaurant as a way of saying thanks for the feedback.

When you receive your copy of the annual survey, we hope that you will take a few minutes to complete it
